Secrets to Nurturing Vegetables For an Abundant Harvest

Whether you're a first-time gardener or have been gardening your whole life, Craig will help you increase not only your harvest but also the enjoyment of your garden. He will teach you how to have healthier, more vibrant soil and tastier vegetables. His information will also enrich the nutritional value of the food you grow. You will learn how to have very few weeds and less pests and disease in your garden without the use of chemicals. Craig will give advice that will help you successfully grow everything from great winter greens to savory summer sweet potatoes in a northern Michigan climate. Come prepared to take lots of notes and ask lots of questions!

Craig Schaaf is the owner of Golden Rule Farm in Kaleva, Michigan. He and his family grow a variety of vegetables for an Italian restaurant in Traverse City. Craig is best known for growing early heirloom tomatoes. He harvested his earliest ripe tomato on April 24th in an unheated hoophouse in Northern lower Michigan. They grow fresh vegetables year-round using many types of season extension. For the past several years, Craig's interactive gardening seminars have been enjoyed by many.
